Thirty-five of them went into battle, twenty-five succumbed to the en-emy, of which number ten died and fourteen onvalesced, and one, Dr. Cavenagh, is still very ill, leaving ten who have been, and we pray will be, saved from the disease. Our octors have done noble work, and deserve the lasting gratitude of the people:

To the Reverend Clergy of the Diocese of Tennes "Man goeth forth to his labor and to his work till the evening." That evening of death has come to our stricken people, and, above the voices of suffering and of mourning, we hear the call of God to an humbling of our hearts in His sight. To this end, and that God may stay the angel of death—that He may make the darkness of this desolation to be light—and as a memorial service of all those who "they may make the darkness of this desolation to be light—and as a memorial service of all those who, "haying finished their bourse in faith, do now rest from their labors," I hereby appoint Wednesday, October 2d., as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer throughout this dioese. I earnestly beseech youberthren of the clerky, to make every effort to the end that the day may be most carefully and thoroughly observed—that so God may sanctify to our spiritual good this, dire affliction. The proper psalms will be the sixth, thirty-eighth and one hundred and thirtieth (6, 38, 130). The proper lessons will be Isalah 58 to v.13, and Hebrews 12th to v. 14. It will be most fitting at this time—and I carnestly hope it may be so done—that we should draw near to the Biessed Lord in the "Most comfortable Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ."
